SIEBEL VARSITY GOLF TRAINING COMPLEX

Stanford University Athletics has teamed with Robert Trent Jones II Golf Course Architects to create what is arguably the most innovative practice facility in all of golf. The 12-acre practice center is designed to provide Stanford's men's and women's intercollegiate teams a unique training experience at a facility that is unmatched in collegiate golf.

Opened in April of 2008, the Siebel Varsity Golf Training Complex is crafted on 30 acres of previously undeveloped land adjacent to the Stanford Golf Course. The distinctive quality of the facility is its six green complexes, complete with bunkering, each inspired by a different design style that Stanford's men's and women's intercollegiate teams play on a regular basis, each complete with intrinsic grasses and sand textures.

The Siebel Varsity Golf Training Complex offers six green complexes, complete with bunkering, each inspired by a different design style. Created to "train by scenario," the Stanford men's and women's intercollegiate teams have the opportunity to play and practice shots that they will face in tournament competition, as each aspect of the facility is designed to emulate courses played during the year.

With a practice facility like none other in the world, the Stanford men's and women's golf teams will be better prepared to challenge any competitor and continue to seek excellence.

STANFORD GOLF COURSE

Opened in 1930, the Stanford Golf Course is steeped in tradition and is annually rated as one of the finest courses in the country.

Designed by architects Billy Bell, George C. Thomas and Alistair McKenzie, Stanford Golf Course continues to host some of the top intercollegiate events in the country, including the Stanford Invitational, Pac-12 championships, NCAA West Regionals, NCAA Women's Championships and USGA Junior Amateur Qualifying.

The famed 12th hole is one of the most difficult in Northern California with four trees lining the middle of the fairway. The 18th tee offers one of the most spectacular views of Bay Area, with the skyline of San Francisco clearly visible in the distance.

A true gem, Stanford Golf Course has honed the skills of many of Stanford's top talents, including Tiger Woods, Tom Watson and Notah Begay III, to name a few.
